REPORTS: PRINCE DIED OF PAINKILLER OVERDOSE

Tests show music superstar Prince, who was found dead in his home in a Minneapolis suburb in late April, died of an overdose of opioid painkillers, media reported Thursday. The Associated Press cited a law enforcement official on the cause of Prince's death, while the Minneapolis Star Tribune cited a source with knowledge of the investigation. A spokesman for the Carver County Sheriff's Office did not immediately respond to requests for comment, and a spokeswoman at the Midwest Medical Examiner's Office said that agency had no new information to release about Prince's death. The cause of death has so far remained undetermined since the 57-year-old singer died April 21. REUTERS

SHOOTER HAD 'KILL LIST,' WOMAN ON LIST DEAD

The man accused of fatally shooting a University of California, Los Angeles, professor in a murder-suicide had written a "kill list" that included a woman who has been found dead in Minnesota, Los Angeles Police Chief Charlie Beck said. Investigators found the list while searching the suspect's home in Minnesota, Beck told Los Angeles television station KTLA, adding that the investigation extended to Minnesota after finding a note at the crime scene. The list also contained the name of another unidentified UCLA professor, who was unharmed, and the woman, he said. "In the residence in Minnesota, we found multiple items, including extra ammunition and also a note with names on it indicating a kill list," Beck told KTLA. Police investigated the woman's home in a nearby town in Minnesota and found she had been shot to death, Beck said. REUTERS

Rachael Ray joins call on city to expand free lunch to all NYC kids

An online petition aims to end income stigma and the bullying that comes with it.

ANGY ALTAMIRANO
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

In an effort to make a final push to the city, celebrity chef Rachael Ray has joined forces with the Lunch 4 Learning campaign to provide all students with free lunch, despite their family income.

The daytime cooking show host officially launched a petition via Change.org calling on Mayor Bill de Blasio to make lunch free at all city public schools in hopes of bringing an end to bullying, income stigma and food insecurity children face.

An estimated 75 percent of the city's 1.1 million public school children have family incomes low enough to be eligible for free or reduced-priced school lunches — below $37,000 for a household of three — but many choose to sit out of it because they have either been ridiculed or fear being singled out by peers.

"All students should have access to a nutritious school lunch. If students don't receive the fuel they need to power through the day, how can we expect them to learn and thrive?" Ray said. "I believe all children should have access to a nutritious school lunch without regard to income. Children simply cannot learn on an empty belly."

The petition — which has since garnered over 27,800 supporters — is an effort together with the Lunch 4 Learning campaign spearheaded by Community Food Advocates, which has been pushing the mayor to expand universal free lunch since 2014.

The campaign has since united over 200 organizational and elected supporters including teachers, principals and students — all behind the idea that lunch should be provided for free to students.

Cities such as Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., and others have already implemented the universal lunch program.

During de Blasio's 2014 budget season, the mayor provided funds to offer students in stand-alone middle schools, which only include sixth to eighth grade, with free lunches.

However, according to Liz Accles, executive director of Community Food Advocates, the mayor has not gone through with a promise he made when campaigning for office in 2013 when he called universal free lunch "crucial" for students.

She said that the goal of the campaign is not to only eliminate the poverty stigma that comes with the way the lunch system is structured at public schools, but also help families that essentially don't qualify for free lunch but still can't afford to pay for the meals.

"There are many kids that are just above the income and you can be significantly above the cutoff and you can be in and she hopes — through the help of Ray and other supporters — it will put pressure on the administration when it meets next week to discuss the budget.

"Children are supposed to get all services regardless of their income," she said. "And this is really an opportunity for the mayor to transform the school lunch experience for all children."

The mayor's office did not respond to a request for comment, however the city's Department of Education said it will continue to monitor the universal lunch program at the schools currently offering it to their students.

"We must ensure students have access to nutritious meals, and that hunger never serves as a hindrance to learning in school. Universal free lunch was expanded and now includes all six to eight stand-alone middle schools and District 75 schools for students with special needs," said Toya Holness, DOE spokeswoman. "We are committed to ensuring our students receive healthy meals in school, and will continue to monitor this program."

MTA testing Wi-Fi on cars on the E line

The move to bring Wi-Fi onto the train cars is part of Gov. Andrew Cuomo's directive to accelerate connectivity on the MTA.

Wi-Fi already on MTA's new buses

On May 17, Cuomo announced that the MTA started rolling out the first of 75 new buses equipped with Wi-Fi and USB charging ports throughout neighborhoods in Queens.

Earlier this year the governor revealed that a total of 2,042 buses would be hitting the city's streets over the next five years, replacing 40 percent of the current fleet of vehicles.

subway car.

Since last week, the MTA has been testing Wi-Fi connection on four cars along the E subway line, NY1 reported.

MTA spokesman

Kevin Ortiz confirmed the testing would be taking place until June 7 and said the E line was selected randomly.

He added that the move to bring Wi-Fi onto the subway cars is part of Gov. Andrew Cuomo's directive to accelerate New Yorkers' connectivity while commuting on the transportation system.

Ortiz said it is too early to determine if the agency will expand Wi-Fi testing to other lines because the initiative is currently in the early stages. All underground subway stations are expected to be wired with Wi-Fi by the end of this year, Ortiz said, and they will all also include cell-phone connectivity by 2017.

Audit: Diversion program for delinquents 'giving up' on kids

Instead of helping steer minors out of the criminal justice system, one city agency is being scrutinized for allegedly putting children at risk by failing to take steps to guarantee services were provided correctly.

City Comptroller Scott Stringer released an audit on Friday that claims the city's Administration for Children's Services (ACS) — aimed at protecting and promoting safety and well-being of city children and families — did not follow up on its responsibility to make sure proper care and rehabilitation services were being provided to children through its Close to Home program.

ACS launched the Close to Home juvenile justice program in 2012 in order to place children between 7 and 15 years old — who were deemed delinquent by Family Court, yet didn't require incarceration — into residential care for rehabilitation.

Through the placement, the children are able to live in a home-like environment closer to their families and the program is expected to of fer a smoother transition back into society.

However, although the program is aimed to offer a community-based path toward rehabilitation, a recent report by the Department of Investigation discovered significant safety and oversight issues by ACS with Close to Home providers — an issue the comptroller decided to examine "from top to bottom."

"Every child in the Close To Home program deserves a chance to get back on the right track, but the Administration for Children's Services mismanagement and hands-off approach to oversight is robbing them of that opportunity," Stringer said.

ACS said Thursday that since the completion of Stringer's audit a year ago, site inspections have been conducted to address safety and security concerns at each of the 27 non-secure placements. The city has also provided the Close to Home program with an additional $4 million and more staff is being hired.

Starting this year, ACS is also making a minimum of eight site visits each year to each site in the program, including four unannounced overnight visits per year.

"The safety of our young people — and communities — is paramount. The NYC Comptroller's audit concluded in June 2015 and, over the past year, ACS has taken numerous steps to improve monitoring and oversight of Close to Home," an ACS spokeswoman said. "We have added experienced staff to monitor the safety of programs, enlisted the NYPD to assess security at all Close to Home sites, and, since 2013, we have shut down three programs that were unable to adhere to our standards."

Before being placed in the program, ACS evaluates the needs of a particular child and assigns them to either a Non-Secure or Limited Secure Placement residence, for a stay of about six or seven months.

According to the audit, which examined ACS' Non-Secure Placement vendor network during Fiscal Years 2014 and 2015, a total of 560 youths were transferred to the program and $94.9 million was spent to house them. Nine providers were contracted by the agency during that time to offer services at 32 sites in the city.

Once in the homes, children are required to receive a call from ACS, an in-person meeting with the agency, parents or guardians are supposed to meet with ACS, and there is supposed to be monthly meetings between the children and agency.

However, the audit found that out of a sample of nine children who were in the program for 83 months, only one child received an initial call; six out of nine in-person meetings took place; one parent or guardian meeting occurred; and ACS was not able to provide evidence that a third of mandatory monthly meetings happened.

"When ACS doesn't bother to meet with children or contact their parents, they're telling these kids they don't matter,"

Each site is also required to receive one announced and once unannounced visit per year, during which the agency looks at security issues, reviews incident logs, and assesses how the program is working for the children.

The audit instead found that ACS does not track if and when a visit occurs, two-thirds of sites did not get unannounced visits in 2014 — with two sites not being visited at all that year — and during site visits, the agency allegedly did not properly assess the program.

The comptroller's office made a total of 14 recommendations to ACS including periodically verifying that children in the program are receiving the required services; creating a system to make sure staff at the site is conducting mandatory visits; and ensuring that site visits actually assess if the youth and communities benefit from the program. CUOMO VS. DE BLASIO

Cuomo to de Blasio: Apologize for false accusation

After Mayor Bill de Blasio blamed the leak of a recent damaging report on a Cuomo appointee, the state inspector general stated it was a Republican at the Board of Elections who was responsible for the leak, and now Gov. Cuomo is asking that the mayor apologize for his accusation.

The report, which called into question de Blasio's 2014 fundraising efforts for upstate Democrats, was originally thought by the mayor to have been leaked by Board of Elections Chief Enforcement Counsel Risa Sugarman, but that accusation was refuted on Wednesday by the state inspector general, CBS2 reported.

De Blasio had been hinting for weeks that, because Sugarman was a Cuomo appointee, the governor was ultimately responsible for the leak of the damaging report, according to NY1. Cuomo said the mayor had falsely accused a public servant who had nothing to do with the leak.

"I'm a big boy. He's a big boy. You want to say something unkind about me, that's one thing. But not public servants that were just doing their job. With no evidence whatsoever, by the way," Cuomo was quoted by NY1. "And now we know definitively that he was wrong."

In response, City Hall said that it was the Board of Elections who should apologize for not having safeguards in place to stop such leaks from happening, CBS2 added.

"The State BOE leaked a confidential memo and has been called out for failing to have proper policies in place to safeguard against these leaks," de Blasio press secretary Karen Hinton said. "The BOE owes the people of New York an apology for such a flagrantly political act."

Cuomo called the leak a sideshow meant to distract from the fact that de Blasio's fundraising was being investigated by the Manhattan DA and U.S. attorney's office, NY1 added.

NY taxi driver group says Uber violating labor laws

A group representing 5,000 Uber Technologies Inc. drivers in New York City filed a lawsuit on Thursday accusing the ride-share company of depriving drivers of various employment protections by misclassifying them as independent contractors.

The proposed class action lawsuit filed in federal court in Manhattan by the New York Taxi Workers Alliance is the latest to claim Uber drivers should be considered employees entitled to minimum wage, overtime pay and reimbursements for expenses.

The group, which represents a total of 19,000 New York taxi, black car and Uber drivers, said it filed a separate complaint on Thursday with the National Labor Relations Board claiming arbitration agreements Uber drivers signed illegally prohibit them from bringing class action claims.

The Taxi Workers Alliance has criticized a recent deal between Uber and the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers union to create an "independent drivers guild" for the company's New York drivers that falls short of union representation, highlighting a sharp divide among labor groups grappling with the rise of the "gig economy."

The group's lawsuit says Uber expanded aggressively in New York beginning in 2011 by promising drivers decent wages. Instead, the group said, most of the drivers' pay went toward car payments, maintenance and surcharges from the company.

"Uber, through its practices and broken promises, severely harmed the thousands of drivers they recruited and have contributed greatly to a 'race to the bottom,'" says the lawsuit, which alleges violations of state and federal employment laws.

The company has said most of its drivers say they enjoy the flexibility that comes with being an independent contractor.

Taxi trade groups have vocally opposed Uber's rapid expansion, saying the company should be required to fingerprint drivers and make cars accessible to people with disabilities, as taxi companies are. REUTERS

NYPD: You weren't cut, you were slashed

A set of new policies announced by the department concerns how officers use force on the job.

JASON NUCKOLLS

letters@metro.us

An NYPD vehicle GETTY IMAGES

The NYPD has laid out new policies for its officers including replacing the word "cut" with "slashing" or "stabbing" and outlining new rules about what type of force authorities are allowed to use against suspects.

In a Friday memo, NYPD officials defined "slashing" and "stabbing" but omitted "cut" from words to be used in describing what type of attack a victim has suffered, the New York Post reported.

"It's pretty silly saying you can give police officers a gun and badge, and put faith in us to make judgments in life-and-death situations, then say, 'I don't think you understand what a stabbing is,'" a source was quoted by the Post.

The NYPD memo defined a stabbing as "a thrust or plunging motion with an edged weapon that causes a puncture wound" and a slashing as "a forceful sweeping stroke with an edged weapon that causes a laceration," according to the Post.

Another set of new rules announced by the department concerns how officers use force on the job, Pix11 reported.

Besides mandating that authorities document any force used by or against an officer, new guidelines specifically prohibit chokeholds done to prevent a suspect from trying to swallow illegal drugs, Pix11 added.

Prior force-related guidelines were written throughout the police patrol guide, Pix11 stated, and the new changes were an effort to better define what constitutes allowable force. The new policies do not alter when officers can and cannot use force.

"We've been asking for years for the NYPD to put in place an excessive force policy," Donna Lieberman, executive director of NYCLU, was quoted by Pix11. "We hope this is a good start and will result in more transparency, more accountability, more training and less unnecessary force."

Hawks are attacking people at St. John's University in Queens

Hawks are on the attack at St. John's University in an apparent attempt to protect one of their own.

Two individuals have been attacked since Wednesday, according to media reports. The incidents happened on Wednesday in front of the school's University Center, and Thursday behind St. John's Hall.

In an email alert, reportedly sent to students and staff on Thursday, public safety wrote that "a smaller baby or injured hawk is currently in the bushes near the rear of St. John's Hall."

"It appears that the larger hawk has become more aggressive in an attempt to protect the smaller or injured hawk."

The email also stated there were "two reported incidents of people being struck in the head by a hawk on the Queens campus," and that "both individuals received lac-

On Thursday DNAinfo also observed "two hawks circling near the baby hawk."

Officers had blocked off the area around St. John's Hall and were "keeping their eye on the hawks."

Floods in France, thousands evacuated

The Quai restaurant is closed due to the floods of the River Seine on Thursday in Paris, France. GETTY IMAGES

President Francois Hollande declared a state of emergency in the worst affected areas.

Torrential rain forced thousands of people from their homes south of Paris while the River Seine surged to its highest level for over 30 years in the French capital, shutting down the famed Louvre and Orsay museums and a metro line.

In Evry-Gregy-sur-Yerre, south of Paris, a man on horseback drowned on Thursday, the prefecture said in a statement. Le Parisien newspaper said the 74-year-old had been trying to cross a flooded field. The horse survived with minor injuries.

He was the second victim of the torrential rains that have caused the Loire and Seine rivers to burst their banks. An 86-year-old woman was found dead in her flooded house in a small town southwest of Paris late on Wednesday.

At least 3,000 out of 13,000 inhabitants were evacuated in Nemours, 45 miles south of Paris, as floodwaters crept toward the second story of buildings in the town center.

In Paris, the Seine rose above 16 feet, forcing the SNCF rail operator to close the RER C commuter line that runs along the river and is used by tourists to reach the Eiffel Tower, Notre-Dame Cathedral and Versailles.

The Louvre museum shut down and said it would remain closed on Friday to keep its priceless art safe. The Orsay museum of Impressionist art will also be shut on Friday. Both are located right by the Seine in central Paris.

Clinton attacks Trump's foreign policy as 'dangerously incoherent'

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton lambasted Donald Trump's foreign policy platform as "dangerously incoherent" in a speech on Thursday that cast her Republican rival as both a dangerous and laughable figure.

A former U.S. secretary of state, Clinton attacked Trump for his policies and his character, suggesting Trump might start a nuclear war if elected to the White House simply because "someone got under his very thin skin."

"Donald Trump's ideas are not just different, they are dangerously incoherent," she said to a room of supporters in San Diego, California. "They're not even really ideas, just a series of bizarre rants, personal feuds and outright lies."

Clinton, the front-runner in the race to become the Democratic presidential nominee, delivered her speech as she seeks to shift her attention to the Nov. 8 election against likely rival Trump and away from Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders, who is continuing his longshot bid for the nomination.

Clinton was speaking in San Diego ahead of California's June 7 primary election.

Democratic Party leaders have fretted about how to best oppose Trump, who managed to knock out all 16 rivals for the Republican nomination in part with his uninhibited style of assailing them with personal insults. Trump revels in referring to Clinton as "Crooked Hillary" and dredging up the infidelities of her husband, Bill Clinton, the former president.

Clinton's remarks were intended in part to show she would not be cowed and that she could go toe-to-toe with him in scornful put-downs. REUTERS

Republican Paul Ryan delivers long-awaited endorsement to Donald Trump

Speaker of the House Paul Ryan GETTY IMAGES

Paul Ryan, the top elected Republican, endorsed Donald Trump on Thursday in the Nov. 8 presidential election, a step toward unifying party loyalists behind the presumptive Republican nominee despite concerns about him.

The decision, announced by the House of Representatives speaker in a column for a newspaper in his home state of Wisconsin, ended a long period of soul-searching over whether to back Trump out of concern about his bellicose rhetoric and positions on issues including trade and immigration.

Ryan's support for Trump surfaced in the middle of a speech by Democratic front-runner Hillary Clinton in which she launched a far-reaching attack on Trump's foreign policy credentials.

The speaker's backing of Trump could give cover to more reluctant Republicans to get behind the billionaire businessman as their best chance to win the White House.

It should also help Trump make the case that he can bring the party together as he girds for a Republican nominating convention in July that many party leaders plan to skip.

Ryan was the 2012 vice presidential running mate of Mitt Romney, who has been sharply critical of Trump.

"It's no secret that he and I have our differences. I won't pretend otherwise," Ryan wrote of Trump. "And when I feel the need to, I'll continue to speak my mind. But the reality is, on the issues that make up our agenda, we have more common ground than disagreement."

Ryan did not specifically use the word "endorse" in his column, but his spokesman, Brendan Buck, made clear that Ryan's move should be seen as an endorsement.

Ryan said he and Trump had spoken many times in recent weeks about how, "by focusing on issues that unite Republicans, we can work together to heal the fissures developed through the primary."

"Through these conversations, I feel confident he would help us turn the ideas in this agenda into laws to help improve people's lives. That's why I'll be voting for him this fall," Ryan said. REUTERS

Ohio prosecutor reviewing Cincinnati Zoo gorilla case

Prosecutors are reviewing a police investigation into the parents of a 3-year-old boy who fell into a gorilla enclosure at the Cincinnati Zoo last Saturday, prompting the killing of an endangered gorilla.

A statement on the website for Hamilton County Prosecutor Joseph Deters said the earliest he would conclude his review would be Friday.

Cincinnati police have said the child's parents and family were the target of the probe and not the operation or safety of the zoo.

Deters' office did not return a call for comment beyond the statement.

A 17-year-old western lowland silverback gorilla named Harambe was shot and killed by Cincinnati Zoo staff after the boy fell into the enclosure. These gorillas are critically endangered and the killing of Harambe triggered intense criticism of the zoo and the boy's parents.

Witnesses said the boy had expressed a desire to get into the enclosure and climbed over a 3-foot barrier, then fell 15 feet into a moat.

The family, whose name has been withheld by police, has declined to comment on the investigation. They said on social media that the child had a concussion and some scrapes, and through a spokeswoman on Wednesday that he was doing well.

Outrage over the gorilla's death has mounted and online petitions at change.org have collected hundreds of thousands of signatures demanding "Justice for Harambe."

The animal rights group Stop Animal Exploitation Now said on Tuesday that it would file a negligence complaint against the zoo with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The group is seeking the maximum penalty of $10,000.

U.S. zoos are left to decide under federal rules how to make animal exhibits safe. REUTERS

BRIEF

Two jets from elite US military squadrons crash, one reported dead

Two fighter jets from elite U.S. military demonstration squadrons crashed in separate incidents on Thursday, including one that had just done a flyover of the Air Force Academy graduation in Colorado where President Barack Obama had spoken.

In Tennessee, one person was killed when an F/A-18 jet from the Navy's Blue Angels squadron crashed in Smyrna, about 24 miles southeast of Nashville, local media reported.

The status of the Navy pilot and the cause of the crash were not immediately known. The crash occurred while the Blue Angels were practicing for a weekend air show, local media said.

In Colorado, a pilot with the Air Force's Thunderbirds squadron was unhurt when his F-16 jet crashed in a field 5 miles south of Peterson Air Force Base, the Air Force said.

The pilot, whose name was not released, ejected safely and was picked up by emergency response crews, the Air Force said.

After leaving the Air Force Academy graduation ceremony, Obama visited the Thunderbird pilot at Peterson AFB to thank him for his service and express relief he had not been seriously hurt, White House spokesman Josh Earnest said.

Earnest said the pilot was up and walking around when the president saw him. The president also thanked the emergency responders who picked up the pilot, Earnest said.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known and the Air Force said it would undertake an investigation. The Air Force's Air Combat Command said on Twitter that no one was hurt on the ground and there was no hazard to the public. REUTERS

Homeland Security chief: 4,700 Syrian refugees approved resettlement to US
The United States has approved 4,700 Syrian refugees who are awaiting resettlement to the country, while an additional 7,900 are awaiting security review, U.S. Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson said on Thursday.

Johnson, speaking to a homeland security advisory panel at the Department of Homeland Security, was defending against critics who say the Obama administration is falling behind meeting its goal of bringing in 10,000 Syrian refugees into the country by the end of fiscal year 2016. REUTERS

What's new in the Hamptons

NYC's summer hamlet has spent the winter getting ready for you.

EVA KIS

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Grab your beach blankets, pack the sunscreen and leave everything else behind for weekends out east.

EAT

The team behind grab-and-go pasta spot Aunt Jake's and subterranean cocktail bar Mulberry Project have launched another project that bears no relation to either with The Greenwich. The new American food is upscale and will aim to "highlight local food in a simple manner" with crowd-pleasers like watermelon salad and ribeye steaks, alongside a full bar and extensive wine list. 1020 Montauk Hwy., Water Mill

Highway Restaurant

& Bar is looking to be your new regular spot. Sophisticated but approachable — the model for the owners' other restaurants, including Pasquale Jones and the NoMad Bar — the menu will have lots of fresh seafood, including daily crudos, as well as eclectic fare like roasted chicken, housemade pastas and farro salad. Dine sipping craft cocktails, surrounded by decades of Hamptons summers past in black-and-white photographs. 290 Montauk Hwy., East Hampton

Aussie cafes with their smoothie bowls and game-raising avocado

Highway Restaurant & Bar PROVIDED

toasts alongside indulgent flat whites are a full-blown trend. One of the Land Down Under's best-known names, Bluestone Lane, just opened inside a former bar space at The Surf Lodge. 183 Edgemere St., Montauk

Take your cravings for stuffed poblanos and arroz con pollo to Union Cantina beginning in mid-June. The Mexican restaurant's menu keeps things pretty standard, though with more seafood, and will carry an extensive selection of tequila. 40 Bowden Square, Southampton

via Kozu, which brings Peruvian-influenced Japanese food and sushi to Southampton — as well as weekend champagne brunch with party promoters David and Daniel Koch. Continue the evening at on-site lounge Beach House. 136 Main St., Southampton

From the ashes of 10ak rises an early favorite for hotspot of the season is A.M. Southampton, a massive new indoor-outdoor nightclub with two bars from the man who brought you 75 Main. Themed nights will include A.M. Fridays, which launched with Fat Joe last weekend, a bi-weekly Saturday afternoon party for the LGBT set called Lemonade, while Sundays will be a mixed bag of music, theater and burlesque called The Box. 125 Tuckahoe Lane, Southampton

Jue Lan Club's fresh take on Chinese food has expanded to some gorgeous farmhouse-style digs in Southampton. Don't just come for the braised oxtail bao and bottomless $34.95 brunches though — there's a gallery of "gritty downtown" art behind the restaurant inside a converted barn that becomes a nightclub after 11 p.m. called Elm & Main. Walshy Fire of Major Lazer and Ja Rule kicked off the party last weekend, so this promises to go a long way toward fixing the Hamptons' live music vacuum. 268 Elm St.

SWEAT

Hamptonites go hard, so Barry's Bootcamp has expanded to its third and biggest Hamptons location yet to make your sweat with high-intensity interval cardio and strength training workouts in Southampton. 10 Montauk Highway, Southampton

Having the beach as your soundtrack is the perfect accompaniment to the flow of New York Pilates, which will begin holding seaside classes at Gurney's Resort & Spa on

June 4. 290 Old Montauk Hwy., Montauk

CONVENIENCE

Since you need a car to get anywhere in the Hamptons, DriverOnTap (free, iPhone) is your new designated driver. Via the app, you can summon a vetted driver to take your crew home in your own car, from Southampton to Montauk. Trips start at $35.

Because you can never manage to carry enough wine over from the mainland and supplies can be tight once you're in the Hamptons, summon a delivery via Sherry-Lehmann Wine & Spirits. A minimum order of $195 or three cases is needed to summon one of their trucks for a free dropoff Tuesday-Saturday. sherry-lehmann.com or 212-838-7500

Gray Malin's Hamptons

The king of beach aircapes shares his tips on what not to miss out East.

letters@metro.us

Gray Malin has turned beach photography into fine art. His cheery aerial shots of destination shorelines are probably on every design enthusiast's wall — a career that started as a hobby. Last month, Malin released "Beaches," a travelogue that weaves together his iPhone-case-worthy images with insider tips and anecdotes.

The project also falls in line with Malin's personal philosophy, "Make every day a getaway," he tells us. "I want people to take a moment and escape when they see a piece of my work."

When a seasoned beachgoer like Malin calls the Hamptons "the most charming beach community in America," we couldn't pass up the chance to ask him about his go-to spots.

Fowler Beach, Southampton

If you're searching for a scene that's more off the beaten path, check out Fowler Beach. "It's nice, nearby and charming, with these cool sand dunes," Malin says.

Sunset Beach

In addition to the tasty restaurants, Sunset Beach on Shelter Island offers a gorgeous scene. "It kind of feels like you're in St. Tropez," says Malin. "It shocked me — it just has a different feel to it."

The Fudge Company

David Schwimmer can stand the heat

The former "Friends" star enters the restaurant world in "Feed the Beast."

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

David Schwimmer hasn't had a lot of luck with leaving behind Ross from "Friends." So he's trying to switch it up — and it seems to be working.

After winning raves for his recent nuanced turn as Robert Kardashian on "The People vs. O.J. Simpson," this Sunday, Schwimmer will take another confident step forward as alcoholic sommelier Tommy Moran on AMC's new drama, "Feed the Beast."

Moran is neck deep in

"Feed the Beast" premieres Sunday, June 5, at 10 p.m. on AMC. ALI PAIGE GOLDSTEIN/AMC

drama: He's raising his son alone while opening a restaurant in the Bronx. His partner (Jim Sturgess) happens to be his best friend and a coke addict.

"In the first couple of episodes, you see what a s—hole this place is, and it's also a metaphor for Tommy's inner life," explains Schwimmer, during actual dinner service inside Thirio, the fictional upscale Greek restaurant of the show built entirely on a soundstage in Queens.

"Complete disorder, it's a mess, everything is broken. And as he gets his life back together, you see the actual restaurant slowly take shape."

Sommelier 101

Though Schwimmer waited tables for seven years before getting his break into acting, his previous career wasn't much help in preparing for this role. He recalls having all of two days before shooting to learn how to be a sommelier, which he got some help with from his friend Josh Nadel, a real sommelier for seven restaurants in New York, including Lafayette.

"Watching him open a bottle of wine is a beautiful thing," he says. "I know about 1 percent of what he knows; somms require a natural talent, and I don't have it."

"Feed the Beast" is by the producers of "Dexter" and "Nurse Jackie," with a similar mix of dark comedy, emotional drama and a criminal element — Sturgess' character Dion Patras burned down his last mafia-owned restaurant, and they haven't exactly forgiven him. For Schwimmer, it came down to the quiet resonance he felt with Tommy, whom he describes as "a good man having a bad year."

"At this point in my life, because my first priority is being a dad for my daughter and a husband, to take a job like this I really have to love the character," he says. "I liked Tommy; my heart went out to him as a father, as a guy who's broken trying to put his life back together."

By dark humor, he means dark

But the show is not all gloom. To keep things from getting too gritty, "there's magical realism," Schwimmer hints. At the heart of it all is the intense friendship between Tommy and Dion forged from growing up together. Making room for a little levity was a challenge, but one that Schwimmer was excited to take on.

"I know how to do broad comedy or situational comedy, so to do something this dark and this restrained, but also know it's going to get a laugh in a really dark way, is very exciting," he says.

"The humor is coming from such a place of pain that it's like a welcome relief when these guys finally joke about something because they're both so f—ed."

The electrifying appeal of Eliot Sumner

The 25-year-old singer-songwriter shares her "Information."

CANDACE MCDUFFIE
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

The vocal prowess of Eliot Sumner is fully showcased on her debut album, "Information," and it proves to be just as sultry as it is cosmic. Released earlier this year from Island, "Information" has just the right amount of drama complimented by ghostly choral vocals, electro atmospherics and proggy synth flourishes.

Sumner, whose North American tour starts on June 1, admits that she can be a bit of a musical perfectionist. However, the 25-year-old daughter of Sting and actress Trudie Styler insists that it only adds to the organic nature of her sound.

"I really believe in leaving things as they are and not forcing anything with me and the band," Sumner clarifies. "We're good friends and we've played together for three and a half years, though, so we're well rehearsed."

Aside from being a talented multi-instrumentalist (she plays bass, guitar, keyboard and drums),

Eliot Sumner was also recently known as the leading force of the group I Blame Coco. PROVIDED

Sumner also is a fearless lyricist. From the bump-tious party fare of "After Dark" to the darker exotica of "Dead Arms and Dead Legs" to the obsessive agitation of the record's title track, she's proven with "Information" that transparency is the key to good songwriting.

"Everything has to come from a very real place — there are days when you feel more inspired to write than others. The whole point [of writing lyrics] is to cross boundaries," she states. "It's like mental meditation and it's the best place to be. With the next record, there will be far fewer limitations."

As far as her upcoming tour is concerned, Sumner, who otherwise splits her time between Brooklyn and London, reveals that she likes to kill her fans with kindness. "We've always made it a point to be as friendly as possible. We have a very old school way of doing things. We'll go say hi [to fans] and next time they may bring their friends to one of our shows. That's what we've learned and it just feels natural."

What also feels natural to the singer is performing live — an adrenaline rush that she has no plans of giving up anytime soon. "I enjoy touring so much that I feel like it shouldn't even be my job. I have a lot of energy onstage. It's the most amazing feeling and I'm kind of addicted to it — I'm not the same person most of the time," Sumner divulges. "Performing makes me stronger. If I was the person that I am onstage all of the time, I would probably be an a—hole."

Andy Samberg plays a musical god prone to ridiculous concerts in the mockumentary "Popstar: Never Stop Never Stopping." UNIVERSAL PICTURES

"Popstar: Never Stop Never Stopping"

Director: Akiva Schaffer
Stars: Andy Samberg, Jorma Taccone
Rating: R

● ● ● ● ●

Can you really savage the music industry when its biggest stars are in your movie? Can you even satirize something that's already ceaselessly ridiculous? Does it really matter if the results are funny anyway? The answers are: no, no and well, you know, not really. At its best, "Popstar: Never Stop Never Stopping" is a whirligig fever-dream reflection of our current pop culture landscape — not just its epic silliness, but its speed and density. Jokes fire at the pace of a Vine video. They're often no more than distractions, just like a few hours wasted cruising social media.

Still, funny's funny, and even "Popstar's" softest blows still hit. Its semi-hero is Connor Friel, aka Connor4real, a pop-rapper who ditched his beloved boy band to skyrocket as a solo god. Bouncing with a stupid grin and oblivious confidence through a bubble swollen by fame and yes men, Connor releases an album, epically unaware it was born to tank. When it does, he starts to unravel at the thought of not being a star, even one who performs a song about how humble he is in front of the word "HUMBLE" writ large and gaudy.

Ain't that so, Bieber? In fact, isn't Bieber far, far more absurd? Little of what "Popstar" conjures can touch reality, not when icons like Biebs and Kanye unleash insanities no writer could dream up. At its worst, "Popstar" is akin to parodies of Trump: funny, yeah, but you can never trump the real deal.

And yet there's so much stuff crammed into its speedy 86 minutes. Most of its running time is a giant whiplash montage, always quick with a TMZ slam, an absurdist aside or another parody video from Samberg and his Lonely Island boys. "Popstar" might think it's sending up the music industry, but it's really sending up how our brains work in 2016: always ready to move onto the next shiny thing. MP

Mets, Yanks both lagging in standings

Both New York squads have key divisional matchups this weekend.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
@ItsGood2BeKing
sports@metro.us

Divisional tilts are in store for both New York baseball clubs this weekend as the Mets take on the Marlins and the Yankees square off with the Orioles.

Friday's Mets-Marlins opener will feature Noah Syndergaard (5-2, 1.87 ERA) making his first start since May 28, a game in which he was ejected in the third inning for throwing behind Chase Utley. "Thor" threw a scoreless inning of relief against the White Sox on Tuesday night to stay sharp. Syndergaard allowed seven hits but struck out 12 in seven frames against the Marlins earlier this year.

Countering for Miami is Tom Koehler (3-5, 4.50 ERA), who's been dancing with danger in his last four starts, allowing five walks per appearance but no more than three runs each time. The Mets are only 14th in walks drawn this season but have been patient against Koehler in the past (40 walks drawn in 80.1 IP dating back to 2013), which has led to success (Koehler is 2-4 with a 4.03 ERA in his last 13 starts vs. New York). Yoenis Cespedes and Michael Conforto both have an OPS over

Matt Harvey will be looking to string together two quality starts in a row Sunday against Miami. GETTY IMAGES

1.000 against Koehler. Bartolo Colon (4-3, 3.39 ERA) gets the ball for Saturday afternoon's game in Miami, and he'll be hoping Giancarlo Stanton stays out of the lineup as the slugger continues to nurse a sore side (Stanton is 5-for-11 with two homers against Colon). It will be interesting to see if Ichiro Suzuki gets an at-bat against Colon, as the veterans have locked horns an eye-popping 106 times (Suzuki has a .274 average against Colon). Opposing Colon is Justin Nicolino (2-3, 4.50 ERA), who's 0-3 over his last five starts. His WHIP is an ugly 1.42 over that span. Nicolino got a no-decision against the Mets last September, allowing three runs on six hits over six innings. One of those hits was a Cespedes home run.

Matt Harvey (4-7, 5.37 ERA) will look to build on his stellar last outing against the White Sox (seven innings, two hits, no runs) in Sunday's series finale. Marlins hitters have combined to bat a meager .180 against "the Dark Knight" all time.

Jose Fernandez (8-2, 2.53 ERA) responds for Miami and he's won seven straight games on the mound, posting a 1.38 ERA in May. David Wright should probably stay out of the lineup on Sunday regardless of his health, as he's 0-for-10 against the Marlins' ace.

Yankees

Nathan Eovaldi (6-2, 3.71 ERA) starts the first of three games at Camden Yards for the Yankees on Friday night, and he'll be looking to improve on his career numbers against Baltimore (16.1 IP, 3.86 ERA, 1.65 WHIP). He's done well against the dangerous Chris Davis, though (one hit in nine ABs, six K's).

The resurgent Chris Tillman (7-1, 2.92 ERA) counters for the Orioles, and he hasn't lost a start since April 13. Didi Gregorius, who swung a hot bat in May (.287 average), is 5-for-10 against Tillman as a Yankee.

Ivan Nova (3-3, 3.98 ERA) will try to buck the trend against the O's; Davis, Mark Trumbo and Matt Wieters are a combined 30 or 80 with nine homers against Nova. However, Nova has a good K/BB ratio this season (4.50), which should aid him against an Orioles offense that ranks in the bottom half in both strikeouts and walks.

Tyler Wilson (2-4, 3.83 ERA) starts for Baltimore, and he'll try to stifle Jacoby Ellsbury this time around after allowing him two hits and a walk in his first start against the Bombers this year.

C.C. Sabathia (3-4, 2.85 ERA) gets the call in the series finale, and he'll be hoping for a bit more run support after having two straight gems against the Blue Jays turned into losses (13.0 IP, four runs, seven hits combined, and the Yankees managed just one run per game).

Kevin Gausman (0-3, 3.78 ERA) answers for Baltimore and the long-ball has bit him lately, as he's allowed six four-baggers in his last two starts combined. The ice-cold Brett Gardner could turn his luck around, as he's batted .308 (.846 OPS) in 19 ABs against Gausman in the past.

Rangers with key decisions to make soon

A harsh truth has been revealed over the last five weeks and 2½ playoff rounds: The New York Rangers were not sufficiently equipped to compete for the Stanley Cup.

Following two seasons in which they were among the NHL's preeminent teams, the Rangers spent much of the 2015-16 campaign ensnared in mediocrity and inconsistency before being eliminated by the Eastern Conference champion Pittsburgh Penguins in the first round.

The Rangers were outscored, 21-10, in the 300 minutes that made up the Eastern Conference Quarterfinal, while spending much of the series being outskated by the Penguins.

The Rangers have $56.075 million in player salary outlay on the books for next season. But Chris Kreider, Kevin Hayes, J.T. Miller and Dylan McIlrath are restricted free agents, while Dominic Moore, Viktor Stalberg, Keith Yandle and Dan Boyle are unrestricted free agents.

Re-signing the quartet of Kreider, Hayes, Miller and McIlrath should satisfy Vigneault's mandate for youth, and all four are home grown.

The unrestricted free agents the Rangers should target are Yandle, Stalberg, Dale Weise and Matt Martin. Yandle provided the Blueshirts an aggressive puck moving, offensive element the remaining defensive corps cannot. Weise, a former Ranger, provided secondary scoring and size to the Canadiens before being traded to Chicago at the deadline. Martin was one-third of the Islanders vaunted fourth line. Along with Casey Cizikas and Cal Clutterbuck, the fourth line provided Jack Capuano with size, physicality, defensive responsibility and was able to contribute offensively. Stalberg was solid in a bottom six role.

It's likely that Moore and Boyle won't be brought back. DENIS GORMAN

Dale Weise could be an option for the Rangers in free agency. GETTY IMAGES

Aries Your ability to adapt and move from one thing to another will impress the people you deal with today. Someone who is jealous of you will go behind your back.

Taurus You'll capture attention with your insight, attention to detail and practicality. A short trip will help you expand your interests and push you in a direction that will lead to a positive gain.

Gemini Dig deep and ask questions. Someone will withhold information that you will need to know before making a decision. Deception is apparent. Take good care of your health.

Cancer A challenge will spur you to participate in something you've never done before. An unexpected change at home will turn out to be beneficial.

Leo An emotional situation will get in the way of your productivity. Don't be afraid to make changes if it will help you reach your goal. Ask someone reliable to pitch in and help.

Virgo It's a good day to address some bothersome issues. An intelligent approach will put you in a good position to make a beneficial decision.

Libra Put greater emphasis on improving your health and visiting places that will ease your stress and help you make positive physical changes. Romance is on the rise.

Scorpio Your desire to do things differently will be met with some opposition if your plans are too costly. An emotional situation will develop if someone feels left out or neglected.

Sagittarius Put more muscle into your work and stay focused until you finish what you start. Don't let anyone sidetrack you or tempt you with indulgent outings.

Capricorn Make plans to spend time with youngsters or friends who enjoy the same physical activities as you. An intelligent move will help you cut costs.

Aquarius Take on projects that will improve your environment or add to your home entertainment options. Romance will lead to a promise that is likely to lack substance.

Pisces Look over your personal papers and make some adjustments that will help you avoid financial stress. Don't feel bad about saying no to someone who is unreasonable. EUGENIA LAST
